DEPRESSANTS	NARCOTICS	HALLUCINOGENS	HALLUCINOGENS	LOOK-ALIKE DRUGS	INHALANTS
Barbiturates/ Methaqualone	Heroin	Phencyclidine (PCP)	Lysergic Acid Diethylamide (LSD)	Appear to be amphetamines and related compounds.	Paint, gasoline, glue and correction fluid fumes.
Barbiturates: Barbs, downs, downers, sleeping pills, yellow jackets, reds, red devils, pinks, blue devils, reds 'n blues. Methaqualone: quaaludes, ludes, rorer, lemmons 714's or 712's.	Horse, junk, dope, shit, chiva, stuff, "H."	PCP, angle dust, wac (pronounced "whack"), Sherman cigarette, Sherms, Mores, wet.	Acid, 'cid, cubes, sugar, microdot, blotter acid, blotter.
Barbiturates are often obtained by theft from the family medicine cabinet, residential burglaries, or pharmacy burglaries. Quaaludes are a sedative hypnotic which, because of their strength and dangers, are seldom prescribed. Counterfeit tablets marked Rorer 714 and Lemmon 714 are circulating with varying amounts of methaqualone.  Street cost: Barbiturates $2 to $5. Methaqualone $4 to $6.	Heroin is a white powder in its pure form. The powder may vary in color from white to tan and even dark brown. In solid form, some heroin has a gummy consistency similar to dark brown caramel candy. Although heroin is still rare among young people, it is growing in popularity because it is frequently represented as cocaine or PCP.  Street cost: $25 for two-tenths of a gram or "balloon." Heroin is inhaled, taken orally or injected.  Paraphernalia: Syringes, spoons (in which heroin is cooked with water for injection).	Once was a legal veterinary anesthetic which is now made only in illegal laboratories. It comes in the form of a viscous, oily liquid or powder. It is often applied in liquid form to dark colored cigarettes. In its liquid form it is often carried in dark glass bottles like those containing vanilla extract. PCP is smoked, sniffed or taken orally.  Street cost: $50 per gram, $20 to $50 per cigarette.	Because it is easy to make in clandestine labs, LSD is making a comeback in the northern California drug market. Liquid drops of LSD are ap- plied to slips of absorbent paper which is segmented into dose units with the use of perforations like those in sheets of postage stamps. This type of "blotter" acid may have printed trademarks such as cartoon characters. "Window Pane" LSD is the crystalline form, compressed into transparent sheets resembling cellophane. Chips of "window pane" are taken orally.  Street cost: $2 to $5 per dose. Such minute amounts of LSD are needed to produce a reaction that a person may hallucinate after absorbing LSD through the pores of the skin after handling the liquid.	Look-alikes are considered a serious problem by northern California enforcement agencies. They are produced in clandestine labs and made to look like prescription drugs, most often counterfeit uppers. The contents are uncontrolled substances: caffeine, antihistamine, ephedrine sulfate, and phenylpropanolamine. When they are taken in quantity, look-alikes produce a mild "high."  Street cost: $1 per dose. They are often distributed in unmarked, white plastic bottles like those used for over- the-counter headache tablets.	The most instantly damaging of abused substances. A common problem in some areas because of the availability of the substances. Locally, inhalants are abused in the form of spray paint (gold and silver). The paint or glue is sprayed or squeezed into a plastic bag and inhaled. The substance may also be poured into a rag and inhaled.  Street cost: retail.
Bloodshot eyes, slurred speech, disorientation, drunken behavior without the odor of alcohol.	Pinpoint pupil constriction, euphoria, drowsiness, nodding head, respiratory depression, apathy, perspiration.	Wide staring eyes or rapidly shifting eye movement, illusions and hallucinations, poor perception of time and distance, paranoia, possible drowsiness, even hyperactivity, irritability, panic, confusion, anxiety, slurred speech, loss of memory, insensitive to pain.	Symptoms of LSD use include dilated pupils, illusions and hallucinations, poor perception of time and distance, panic depression, anxiety.	Loss of appetite, hyperactivity, restlessness.	Wild eyes, dilated pupils, psychosis, paranoia, violent actions, paint on the face, petroleum odor.
Abuse may result in physical and psychological dependence (tolerance to greater quantities of doses develops rapidly), convulsions, unconsciousness, coma, death from overdose or with- drawal. (Withdrawal worse than heroin.)	High physical and psychological dependence. Overdose: slow shallow breathing, clammy skin, convulsions, coma, death.	PCP produces an intense "trip" or experience for the user. Use of the substance may produce psychosis, psychological dependence and death through irrational, careless behavior (leaping out of windows, etc.)	LSD produces an intense "trip" or experience for the user. Use of the substance may produce psychosis, psychological dependence and death through irrational, careless behavior (leaping out of windows, etc.)	Accidental poisoning from a lack of quality control. Great danger of ingesting a large quantity of the real drug by accident. If real drugs are taken in the quantity needed to produce a "high" with look-alikes, danger of an overdose, possible death.	Instant and generally permanent brain damage, psychosis and death.
